EMONIES.

The thirtieth anniversary of the birthday of the Grand Duke Constantine was signalized yesterday in this city by the raising of the stern post of a new flag ship of the Russian mavy, to be built at the yard of William H. Webb. There were present to witness the interesting ceremonies peculiar to the Russian custom the following distinguished genitemen: Baron de Stocckl, Russian minister at Washington: Captain Shestacoff, who is to be commander of the new frigate; Captain Schwartz, Captain Wastshenko, Captain Crown, Captain Trelenfeldt, Lieut. Mazayske, Lieut. Selinckoff, Lieut. Belavenetz, and Lieut. Kolobin, of the Russian mavy; Captain Charles H. Marshall, Henry Grinnell, esq.; Mr. Parrot, of the West Point foundry; Mr. Wm. Lobach, Russian agent; Mr. De Nottbach, Russian consul, and his secretary, Mr. Cokclsky; Samuel Pook, United States naval contractor: Hon. Mayor Wood, Hon. John McKeon, Hon. Edward Crosswell, and other gentlemen of like note. Mme. Shestahoff and Mme. Lietenfedit were also present.

CEREMONY OF BAISING THE STERN POST.

The long, massive keel of the proposed vessel has been The long, massive keel of the proposed vessel has been for some mouths in the course of construction, and is now just adjusted on the blocks. The end projects several feet into the water at high tide, and around it, leaving sufficient space to adjust the stern post in its place, a platform was erected for the accommodation of the spectators. The stern post lay ready to be hoisted into its place, and about half-past eleven, everything being in readiness, the ceremonies commenced.

In the absence of the clergyman, Capt. Belavenetz uttered the Puter Noster, while the spectators reverentially uncovered their heads. Baron Stocki then placed in the cavity of the keel a silver plate, bearing the following interprinting in the Russian language. The seventy-gun ship

GRAND ADMIRAL.

Commenced September 21, 1857, in New York, in the presence of Baron Stoeckl, Russian minister to the United States, on the plan of W. H. Webb, American shipbuilder, of New York.

The Baron then anointed the plate with mortar, when the workmen raised the stern post to its place, and completed that part of the ceremony.

The process of driving the first bolt was then commenced, the builder, Mr. W. H. Webb, giving the first stroke with the hammer, Baron Stoeckl giving the second stroke, and each of the guests who chose giving a stroke in his turn, the workmen finishing the performance.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VESSEL.

The frigate is to be called the Grand Admiral, after the title of the Grand Duke Constantine. She is to be the flag-ship of the Russian mays, and is to be constructed perfectly regardless of expense, with the sole aim of excellence. Her dimensions are to be 325 feet extreme length, 55 feet breadth, and 36 feet depth. She is to be built of white-oak frame, her principal timbers of livoak. The keel is the largest that has ever been laid in New York, and is of white oak. The timbers are of unosk. The keet is the largest that has ever been haid in New York, and is of white oak. The timbers are of unusual length, and have been in course of collection by Mr. Webb for the last three years. The contract for the ship has been in existence since 1853, when it was concluded by Mr. Webb during his visit to St. Petersburgh. The foundation on which the keel is laid, owing to the vast weight of the vessel, has occupied over a month in construction, and forms no slight portion of the work. The frigate will be a screw steamer, with two engines, and the design is to attain a greater speed than any other war vessel in the world. Her strength is to be as great as mechanical skill can produce. In addition to her massive, solid timbers she is to have iron straps running diagonally fore and aft on the outside—an entirely new feature in shipbuilding. The engines and furniture of the ship are to be of the most costly description, though the contracts have not yet been given out. The furniture, crockery, plate, and adornments are to be in the most costly style of regal splendor. It is estimated that over a million of dollars will be expended on her aside from her armament. The entire arrangements are under the control of Mr. W. H. Webb, who has contracted to have the ship launched in 1858, and finished ready to sail in the spring of 1859. She is the third ship constructed for the Rus. launched in 1858, and finished ready to sail in the spring of 1859. She is the third ship constructed for the Rus ian nay in the United States.

Mr. Webb is also building for the Russian government Mr. Webb is also building for the Russian government a corvette (propeller) of ten guns, destined for service at the Russian ports in the Pacific ocean. The dimensions are: length, 220 feet; width, 37 feet; and depth, 18 feet. She will be provided with two oscillating engines from the Novelty Works, of 300-horse power, and three-feet stroke, with cylinders 54 inches in diameter. He construction will be very strong. She will have a light draught of only 13 or 14 feet, to enable her to move easily account of the Pacific Pacific and Mr. ly among the waters of the Bussian Pacific ports. The vessel (which will be full rigged) will probably be ready for launching early next year. Though the dimensions of the Grand Admiral are hardly larger than those of the of the Grand Admiral are hardly larger than those of the Niagara, Mr. Webb expresses his confidence that her can pacity will be somewhat greater, and, to use his own modest expression, he will make her a model of Ameri-can shipbuilding. For some peculiar reason a more de-tailed description of the interior arrangements of the ship is withheld. The original proposition (about five years ago) for the building of this vessel provided for three tiers of guns, but Mr. Webb at that time advised the adoption of a plan for only two tiers, and this has finally been settled on. The guns are disposed in a similar manscoption of a plan for only two tiers, and this has mainly been settled on. The guns are disposed in a similar man-ner on the Merrimac, Wabash, and other war-vessels re-cently added to the American navy. The engines, two in number, will have a stroke of 3 feet 9 inches, with cylinders about 84 inches in diameter. The vessel will be full rigged. In giving the contract for this vessel to one of our citizens, it was the design of the Russian government to obtain a ship which should be a model of strength, symmetry, and all other desirable features in naval architecture, and complete in all the detail of its naval architecture, and complete in all the detail of its equipments. A splendid cabin will be fitted up for the use of the Grand Admiral of Russia.

BREAKPAST AT THE CLARENDON. The ceremonies being concluded, the guests, by invita-tion of Baron Stoeckl, adjourned to a dejeuner at the Cla-rendon, which Messrs. Kerner and Birch, the proprietors, served in recherche style, as usual. The centre of the table was ornamented with a peculiarly Dutch-looking craft, built of sugar—a specimen of the naval architecture of Mr. Kerner. She bore the Russian, Dutch, and American flags, and floated in a sweet rea of confectionery.

Due justice having been done to the edibles and drinkables, the comfort and enjoyment of all being greatly enhanced by the courteous hospitality of Baron Sta

Capt. Shestakoff proposed the health of Baron Stoeckl. Baron Stoeckl stated that he should not make a speech, as that was no part of diplomacy; he would propose the health of Mayor Wood, of the city of New York.

Mayor Wood said that, following the example of his illustrious predecessors, he should not inflict them with a speech, but would return his sincere thanks for this compliment. He would say that it afforded him much pleasure to have been present to-day and meet with them. He had no doubt that the vessel in whose honor it might be said they had assembled would meet the expectations of its builder, which he knew to be very high, and the conits builder, which he knew to be very high, and the confident anticipations of the government of Russia, which has so honored the American shipbuilders by having this

The Russian consul, Mr. Notibeek, was toasted, and made a felicitous response.

One of the guests, Mr. W. H. Gray, asked the privilege of offering a toast. This was, he said, a meeting engendered by the arts, and by the reciprocal good will of the people of Russia and America. It was a curious coincidence that the destinies of America, were first ene that the destinies of America were first entrusted to that little ship, the Mayflower, and that the destinies of Russia may have been involved when Peter the Great went to learn shipbuilding in Holland. He had observed, and he would not say it with reference specially to this occasion, that in this country it appeared to be the practice, on all great occasions where the genius of an American mechanic is the real cause of the assem-of an American mechanic is the real cause of the assemblage, that his name was almost universally omitted.

Mr. Webb (interrupting)—Allow me to say—art of ship-building in America, and therefore beg to propose his health. [Cheers.]

Captain Shestakoff expressed his perfect acquiescence in all that the previous speaker had said, but he could explain the matter satisfactorily by an anecdote. Peter the Great once reprimanded the commanders of a fort who had neglected to salute him. The commander replied that he had thirty reasons for the omission, the first of which was that he had no powder. The great King said that further reasons were unnecessary. So, it appeared in this instance, that Mr. Wobb had himself requested that he should not be toasted, which was the reason of that he should not be toasted, which was the reason of

Webb stated that it was by his personal request

Mr. Shestakoff then proposed the health of Mr. Webb, to which Mr. Webb responded that be should endeavor to construct a model ship, for, the Russian navy, and do his utmost to turn out a true Yankee ship.

Mr. Loback proposed the health of Captain Shestakoff, after which the company separated, much pleased with the day's exercise, and with pleasant memories of the atern-post of the Russian flag-ship Grand Admiral.

The sun is high in Heaven, a favoring breeze Fills the white sails, and sweeps the rippling seas; And the tall vessel walks her destined way, And steams and glitters in the curling spray And tells his jest and carols out his song And lungs his laughter, vehement and long; And nods the head, and waves the parting hand To those who creep upon the lessening strand.

Days pass ; the sun withdraws his light ; Terrino in her grandeur reigns the night! In gusts and moanings hollow raves the blast, And cloude pour out their fury as they pass. It comes! it comes! from skies convulsed and riven The tempest leaps ; the artillery of Heaven Peals from the clouds ; the arrowy lightning's gleam Glares on the deep, and glids the raging stream "The ship is rinking!" terrible and slow, Along the deck the anguished whispers go, No more remains to fan life's feeble fires, And hope's last throb just flutters and expires.

Death! when thy shadowy sceptre waves away From his sad couch the pris'ner of decay, There friendship views the close with glistening eye, And love's fond lips imbibe the parting sigh ; And love's lond his limited the batter and age,

Or such keen torments edged thy dart as now?

Vain were the task for mortal mind to glean The crowding horrors of the closing scene. Lond thrills the death shrick from the crowded deck, Down the deep guif as roots the staggering wreck, Shrisk after shrisk the dying struggle tells. And each dark billow peaks a hundred knells; All sink at last beneath the wholming stream, And all that once was life becomes a dream; And naught is heard of all the tumult save The hoarse, deep murmur of the surging wave.

Who shall mark Where, vainly struggling, sank that foundering bark?

No rude carved record o'er the hillocks breast

Tells the bright hope that soothed the slumberer's rest;

No spring flowers budding from the funeral ground

Whisper their "still resurgam" all around,

Figures cold shound of unrelenting sloom But one cold shroud of unrelenting gloom Curtains the silent chambers of their tomb ; Far, far beneath in coral graves they lie, The deep their seputchre, their pail the sky, Where the loud tempest sings their wild lam And the tall billows rear their monument. By mouning gusts their requiems are sung, Their's is the storm's wild howl, the thunder's tongue

Oh! there is grief for them and bitter tears. And anguished thoughts through long and joyless years.

And childish tongues will babble of their names, And lonely hearts will dwell upon the theme. WARRINGTON CITY, September 21.

The money article in the Times contains extended remarks in regard to the New York crisis, and American securities generally. It estimates the amount of American stocks held in London at £80,000,000 to £190,000,000 and deprecates the apathy exhibited by capitalists as to the management of railroad affairs in England, while in America there is a powerful combination for the avowed purpose of bringing all the principal undertakings to ruin. COOKING RANGES.

COOKING RANGES.

I HAVE this day received at the Metropolitan Stove, Grate, Hot-air Furnace, and Cooking Range Factory a few of the Spence elevated oven hot-air cocking ranges. They will do all the cooking, washing, ironing, &c., and hoat the parlor and chambers above, with one small coal fire.

Also, the best and latest improved parlor fire-places, which also heat the rooms above like the range.

I invite all those in want of the above to call at my dwelling, No. 443, 11th street, between G and H, where you can see them both in full operation and examine for yourselves. They are certainly the best cocking range and furnace ever before offered in this market. There were put up in Baltimore last fail over 150 of the ranges, all of which have given perfect satisfaction, and I can produce references to that effect. I am the sole agent for the above for this city.

Please call at the Metropolitan Stove and Grate Factory, Nos. 318 and 322, where you can purchase a good and cheap stove, range, or furnace, and also furnishing articles cheap for cash,
